In 1998 the Open Society Foundation – Sofia focussed on supporting the development of Bulgarian nonprofit organizations as a corrective of the executive authorities, a guarantee in implementing government decisions, and a generator of new ideas. The government also proved ready to cooperate with the NGO community and this lead to the development of efficient models of partnership, which consolidated the efforts in fighting corruption and integrating minorities. If 1997 was a year of change, 1998 was undoubtedly the year in which the Bulgarian Third Sector became aware of its responsibility and emerged as an equipotent actor in social development.

The official visit of President Stoyanov to the US was the perfect opportunity for Bulgarian NGOs to showcase their achievements and establish contacts with American counterparts. OSF – Sofia took up this chance and, together with the German Marshall Fund, the Charles Stuart Mott Foundation and the OSI – New York, organized a one day conference for Bulgarian and American NGOs. 25 Bulgarian NGOs presented their activities and debated with more than 50 US partners.

The Open Society Foundation – Sofia supported the drafting of a Law on NGOs, which embodied the main principles of modern European NGO legislation.

In October, the Foundation successfully finalized the Humanitarian School Feeding Program for the poverty–stricken regions of Kurdzhali, Smolyan, Yakoruda, Belogradchik, and Montana. It was financed with a $9,000,000 donation by George Soros: 193,125 students from over 2,000 schools and 26,056 children from over 1,000 kindergartens in 188 municipalities benefited from this program.

The establishment of two free legal aid agencies, specialized in putting up human rights and administrative law cases at the International Court in Strasbourg, came as a result of the Foundation's collaboration with the Association for European Integration and Human Rights, and the Association for Civil Society and Legal Initiatives, both active in the field of legal reform. OSF – Sofia cooperated with the Union of Bulgarian Judges, the Ministry of Justice and Legal Integration, and the USAID to lay the foundations of a Center for Judicial Training.

In March 1998, the Foundation launched the Local Government Reform Program, which developed projects determining the spheres of action and the areas of cooperation between local and central administrations, addressing problems associated with illegal construction, and introducing European standards for accessible urban environment. The Program seeks to reform public administration by promoting effective forms of civil participation.

With its new strategy on minority issues the foundation focused on empowering minorities to act on their own by mobilizing the grass-root community level. Three local Roma centers were set up under the Roma Program to provide administrative and legal services to Roma people, and facilitate their contacts with educational and local government authorities. Another five centers are to be set up in 1999 to launch a network of Roma local centers as a structure partnering to other NGOs, specialized in Roma issues.

In 1998, the Foundation consistently worked towards a reform in Bulgarian health care system: projects, aimed at preparing hospitals for functioning under the new health insurance system, were funded on a preferential basis. To give only one example, the Medicine and Healthcare Fund supported the introduction of an integrated information database at the First City Hospital in Sofia to ensure the smooth transition of hospital administration to the new insurance standards. In addition, the Fund was very active in mobilizing community resources towards drug abuse prevention among children: a grant of US$5860 was approved for establishing a Specialized Child-Care Center in Targovishte. This project developed by the Life Foundation succeeded in uniting the efforts of local government structures, NGOs, and school authorities for a consistent joint action.

The foundation was very successful in attracting and distributing among Bulgarian hospitals medical supplies and equipment worth US$2,000,000, donated by Carelift International and the Albert Schweitzer Institute for the Humanities.

Throughout the year, the Market Economy Fund focused on developing effective models and mechanisms for encouraging small and medium-size enterprise as a prerequisite for economic prosperity in the country. The Fund supported the establishment of information and advisory centers and funded research projects on issues of key importance for the development of Bulgarian economy: establishing a modern and operational futures commodity exchange, interconnecting Bulgarian structural reform with Southeast European stabilization efforts and regional cooperation; addressing problems of Bulgarian economy under currency board.

The Universities Program reconsidered its priorities. The funds allocated to educational projects abroad were reduced considerably. The number of students' projects and academic forums in Bulgaria, organized by universities and NGOs, increased significantly. The Foundation managed to engage Bulgarian universities and a slow, irreversible process of harmonizing Bulgarian higher education with the European standards was started. Projects of Bulgarian universities on curriculum and university management reform were successfully launched under the Renewal for University Education Project.

The Scholarships Fund supported, through open competitions, excelling students from 14 Bulgarian universities, as well as young scholars and scientists who continue their education in Master's and Doctoral programs at leading universities in Western, Central and Eastern Europe, and the United States. The results of the Fund's work are best illustrated by the high number of scholarship students who defended successfully their Ph.D. thesis. The Fund also administers OSI – New York competitions for graduate and post-graduate studies in British, and Central and Eastern European universities

The Foreign Language Teaching Program supported the professional training of foreign language teachers and professors and funded a number of specialized publications, including the first magazine on foreign language teaching in Bulgaria.

The Foundation cooperated with the European Center for Modern Languages at the Council of Europe, the government of Spain, the Ministry of Education and Science, the cultural institutes of Great Britain, France and Germany, the British Council, the New Bulgarian University, and the University of Shoumen. The Program supported a number of exchange projects with schools in France and Germany.

The Foundation continued to work under the High School Exchange Program cooperating closely with the ASSIST, the HMS, the Center for Cultural Interchange (CCI), and the Rotary International. With the US$275,000 they contributed to the program, and the grant provided by OSI – New York, 29 Bulgarian high school students were given the opportunity to study under one-month to one-year programs in the USA and the UK.

Throughout 1998, the International Exchange Fund provided many prominent Bulgarian scholars in the humanities with the opportunity to present their achievements at various international forums. The Fund supported professionals working on specific problems of the transition to democratic society and market economy. The Fund's traditional competition for research projects at leading foreign instituted and universities was organized for the fourth time in 1998, providing Bulgarian scholars with the opportunity to work on the topic "Bulgaria: Between the East and the West After the 19th Century".

The Libraries Fund cooperated with the Northeast Document Conservation Center in Massachusetts in organizing an educational seminar for librarians on the preservation, restoration and conservation of library materials. This forum marked the beginning of a series of educational seminars in different areas of the country, led by foreign and Bulgarian lecturers. Another important project of the Fund was the linking of 11 regional and scientific libraries to the National Automated Library Information Network (NALIN). As a result of the successful cooperation with the US Sabre Foundation and the Center for the Study of Democracy, more than 40,000 volumes of textbooks and scientific literature were donated to various libraries throughout the country. The Fund initiated the project "Chance for Bulgarian Libraries in the 21st Century", which will analyze the condition of the libraries in Bulgaria and will suggest a program for their structural stabilization and development.

The Internet Program provided a number of Bulgarian NGOs with access to the global information network. The Program supported the establishing of a Public Internet Center in the Sofia City Library, which offers a variety of information services and free access to e-mail services and the Internet. Modern information technologies were popularized in a series of training seminars. The Program financed a number of important projects in culture and education, such as the multimedia database on traditional Bulgarian folklore and the Bulgarian Internet Encyclopedia.

At the beginning of the year the Board of Trustees reformulated the foundation's strategy. The change was oriented towards consolidating program activities and encouraging viable structures within the foundation to become autonomous organizations, partnership at all levels being its key concept. Part of this change was the new policy towards the 13 Open Society Clubs. They are no longer perceived as redistributors of OSF grants, but rather as a network of independent organizations with significant experience and potential. Their collaboration was strongly stimulated: as a result the Bulgarian Regional Development Association was set up, hosting the OSF clubs, with the ambition to combine the efforts of all NGOs that develop projects of regional importance. The Open Society Clubs in Gabrovo and Stara Zagora implemented a joint project on the socializing of orphanage children. The efforts of OSF – Clubs to work together as a network of independent organizations was acknowledged at the end of the year when they won the National Tender for managing the PHARE – Partnership Microprojects Scheme, in coalition with the Union of Bulgarian Foundations and Associations, and other NGOs. Four clubs successfully applied to the Charles Stuart Mott Foundation and received additional two-year grants.

A good example of the proactive role of the Foundation in establishing partnerships was the managing of the PHARE Democracy Microprojects '97 program of EC. The Foundation's management proved to be a sound success: the number of NGO applicants increased three times, one third of them being local NGOs. Thus, with the active involvement of the Foundation's network of information centers the outreach of the program was much improved.

With the support of the European Fund, Bulgarian specialists participated and delivered lectures in prestigious forums abroad. The Fund organized conferences and training seminars in European integration for representatives of the local administration. Many Bulgarian students were supported for their participation in summer schools of European integration and long-term programs at prestigious European universities. New periodicals on Balkan cooperation, European culture, and politics were launched and develop successfully with the support of the Fund.

The Soros Center for the Arts – Sofia, which during its first year of operating as independent NGO became the center of new type of cultural management, won the National tender of the Delegation of the European Commission in Bulgaria for managing the Arts Development Fund (BG 9606). The center offers information and consultations on cultural programs and organizations active in culture. In 1998, its programs supported more than 400 contemporary arts projects and periodicals in culture.

In 1998, the Media Program at the foundation co-organized and co-financed a National Conference on Media Law, which brought together a number of representatives of journalist associations, non-governmental organizations, the Delegation of the European Commission, and the Government of Bulgaria, for a discussion on crucial matters of media legislation like the statute and authority of the radio and television regulatory bodies; the equality of public and private media before the law, and the constitution of a fair legal procedure for radio and TV licensing. The Program's capacity for establishing working partnerships with interested stakeholders in the field, and its impressive record in hitting hot issues on media development in the country, led to establishing a Media Development Center in September. It was meant to further support the establishment of a network of viable partnerships in the field of professional training for journalists, setting up high professional standards, and promoting public debate on important media issues. The Center already initiated a joint training program for journalists, together with the Deutsche Welle Radio Training Center, the BBC World Service and the Dutch PRESS NOW Foundation. In 1998, it also supported the establishing of the first radio studio for programs, addressing Roma issues, by donating technical equipment to the DIVE Foundation for the Development of Roma Culture.

However, in spite of the many successful projects supported in 1998, the Foundation was unable to cover all areas of social change and meet all the needs. At the end of the year, a new tendency emerged, which we will follow in our future work concentrating our efforts to some specific areas of support, where our work could bring about tangible and sustainable results.

Open Society Information Network

In 1998, more than 200 Bulgarian and international institutions (grant-giving organizations and foundations, embassies, cultural and information centers, universities) approached the National Open Society Information Network in order to publicize different programs open for Bulgaria. Thus, the network proved to be an effective resource of the Open Society Foundation – Sofia in establishing partnerships with both donors and grant-seekers.

Throughout the year, the network focused on facilitating the access of individuals and organizations from all over the country to the grant-giving programs of the Open Society Foundation – Sofia and its affiliated organizations and partners. As a result of this effort 49% of the 2,600 projects supported in 1998 are being carried out in the country, as compared to 13% – in Sofia, and 38% – abroad.

A new trend in the activity of the network was to encourage local organizations' participation in joint projects, in which the Open Society Foundation – Sofia is not merely a grant-giver, but an immediate participant.

Presently, the network consists of 18 regional Open Society Information Centers, which communicate on an everyday basis with local educational and cultural institutions, nonprofit and civil organizations, the local administration, and the media. Thus, it not only publicizes grant-giving programs and institutions, but acts as an effective instrument for identifying local needs and gathering feedback information on projects that have been supported.

In 1998, the network information and advisory services were provided by 23 qualified consultants specializing in education, NGO development, European and international programs open for Bulgaria.

The network is often contracted to administer information campaigns for international grant-giving programs. In 1998, it was commissioned to work under three programs of the European Union: Phare-Democracy Microprojects, Phare-Arts Development Fund BG 9606, and Phare-Partnership.

Throughout the year, the network continued to provide free information and advisory services on:

- education opportunities in Bulgaria and aborad;
- nonprofit and civil organizations;
- European and international programs open for Bulgaria.

The activity of the network was supported by the United States Information Agency and the European Foundation Center, among others. The Delegation of the European Commission in Bulgaria was among the key partners of the network.

Throughout the year, the Open Society Information Network provided more than 50,000 individual consultations and organized over 100 information meetings and promotions throughout the country.

Among the most frequently used services of the Open Society Information Network were:

- specialized libraries;
- individual consultations;
- information services on various programs open for Bulgaria;
- assistance in planning fund-raising activities and approaching other donors;
- information meetings and presentations to local target groups;
- information campaigns for publicizing grant-giving programs;
- distributing information to the immediate users;
- local media campaigns;
- monitoring supported projects.

The English and Bulgarian versions of the Directory of Nonprofit Organizations in Bulgaria – in print and on CD-ROM – were also made available in all the Open Society Information Centers in the network. In 1999, the Directory will be updated and reprinted.

In 1998, the Bulgarian version of the OSF – Sofia Newsletter became a biweekly publication and, together with the Wide Awake monthly bulletin in English, was sent out to 3,400 carefully selected subscribers: experts and organizations active in education, local administration bodies, state and cultural institutions, NGOs.

The electronic publications of the Open Society Network provide information on the foundation's program activity to Internet users all over the world.

4. Seminars and Workshops:	10 %
5. Support to Art Groups at Foundling Homes:	9 %
6. Humanitarian Assistance:	8 %

In 1998, the Raina Kabaivanska Charity Foundation focused on:

- funding special music classes for talented children in first to fourth grade, who have been selected from orphanages all over the country. The 36 scholarship students of the Foundation live in the Rada Kirkovich Foundling Home in Plovdiv and, along with their primary school lessons, attend music classes in the Dobrin Petkov Secondary School of Music. Two full-time instructors assist the children in their studies of music and voice practice;
- supporting the development of folklore groups and bands at the Rada Kirkovich Foundling Home;
- selecting talented children who have a pronounced sense of music for the new school year. Professors at the Dobrin Petkov School of Music visited all the orphanages for preschool aged children in the country and selected 22 first-graders, who already attend classes in a general education school in Plovdiv and in the Dobrin Petkov School of Music;
- financing 32 individual scholarships students, aged 6 to 20, for their studies in the arts (singing, playing different musical instruments, voice practice, painting, iconography, drama);
- supporting art groups at foundling homes;
- holding seminars and workshops to improve the qualification of art instructors at foundling homes in nine regions of Bulgaria;
- organizing summer art camps in cooperation with the Future for Bulgaria Foundation and the Open Society Foundation – Sofia. 2,040 children from 95 foundling homes in Bulgaria spent part of their summer holidays in the seaside villages of Ravda and Byala. The Raina Kabaivanska Charity Foundation took care of the artistic side of the children's stay by the seaside. Composers, music instructors, choreographers, actors, artists, graduate and post-graduate students in social practices at the Bourgas Free University spent unforgettable moments with the kids;
- providing humanitarian assistance.

In 1998, the Soros Center for the Arts focused its activities on developing and supporting projects, which introduce new models of cultural policy and cultural management, and foster the establishment of a new environment in Bulgarian culture.

The Center continued its cooperation with other NGOs and cultural institutes in Bulgaria and Europe. The Summer Academy for Performing Arts – Sofia was organized for the second time together with the Felix Meritis Foundation – Amsterdam, the New Bulgarian University – Sofia and the Gulliver Clearing House – Sofia. In 1998, the Soros Center for the Arts started a New Scheme for cultural journals support – a project financed by the MATRA Program of the Dutch Foreign Ministry. A new phase of the Bulgarian Art Register, a project documenting Bulgarian art electronically, was developed as well.

Throughout the year, the Soros Center for the Arts strengthened its position as an information resource center. An agreement with the PHARE Program was sighed for organizing the information and advisory campaign of the Arts Development Fund – a component of the PHARE Program for Support of Bulgarian Culture. The Soros Center for the Arts has remained the information point in Bulgaria for the Soros Documentary Film Fund, the Amsterdam-Maastricht Summer University, the European Diploma in Cultural Management, and other international programs.

In 1998, the Soros Center for the Arts supported 430 projects worth more than $720,000.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – GABROVO

In 1998, the Gabrovo club consolidated its activities into several priority areas. The projects developed and supported by the club were targeted to the young people in Gabrovo and aimed at promoting the cultural values of the town and encouraging civil involvement. The club continued to seek partnership and developed 6 joint projects, which are expected to have a long-term impact.

Throughout the year, the club managed to attract local resources and additional funding from the Open Society Foundation – Sofia. The projects supported by the club in 1998 amount to a total of $42,202. The Youth Parliament, the training program for young volunteers, and the Regional Youth Council were among the most rewarding projects of the club.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – PLEVEN

The Open Society Club – Pleven followed its traditional program guidelines, focusing on projects in public health and ecology. A series of health seminars were organized in cooperation with the Dreyfus Foundation – New York. The club also developed some interesting projects in education such as the interclub project "Education and Science: Alternative Models of Education in a Technological Environment," and the Incubator for Young Rockefellers designed to develop business thinking in young people. In 1998, the club developed and supported projects amounting to a total of $33,910.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – PLOVDIV

In 1998, the efforts of the Plovdiv club were concentrated on redefining the needs of the local community and identifying prospective partners. Although the club focused on organizing thematic meetings and discussions on key problems of education, civil society development, and culture, funds were also allocated to provide humanitarian relief to socially disadvantaged children, and support some initiatives related to the European Month of Culture – Plovdiv '99.

Throughout the year, the Open Society Club – Plovdiv participated in three interclub projects. The club hopes to consolidate the efforts of the entire network in the summer of 1999 when the European Month of Culture in Plovdiv will be at its peak.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – ROUSEE

In 1998, the Open Society Club – Rousse once again proved to be an organization with valuable and interesting ideas in all program areas. A new tendency in the 40 projects developed by the club were the initiatives targeted to the children of the town. They include, among others, the Sasha Popov Music Academy for young talented musicians and the Children against Violence Art Competition.

The accents in the activity of the Open Society Club – Rousse in 1998 were associated with regional economic development and European integration. Noteworthy projects include the Investor '98 Business Forum, the 1998 Autumn Fashion Review, and the Saturday, 10 o'clock, Radio Program, which invited foreign ambassadors in Bulgaria for an open discussion on current problems of European integration.

The Open Society Club – Rousse also supported a number of cultural projects including, among others, the Annual Literary Competition for Young Writers and the Golden Rebec International Folklore Festival.

The club was among the winners of the competition organized by the Charles Stuart Mott Foundation.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – SLIVEN

In 1998, the Open Society Club – Sliven built on the image it managed to achieve in the last few years. With its activity, the club emerged as a significant local resource and succeeded in addressing topical problems of the region. This can hardly be discerned behind the statistics (28 projects worth $25,621), but is clearly demonstrated in some of the club's projects: "Nonprofit Sector–Business Cooperation," "Public Involvement in Preventing Tax Law Violations," "Business Directory of the Sliven District and Investment Profile of the Region". The projects mentioned above not only address specific problems of the region, but have already produced tangible results. The Nonprofit Sector–Business Cooperation Project has publicized the opportunity for using convicts' labor by printing a catalog of more than 200 items, produced in the local prison for women. The cooperation with the Tax Police under the Public Involvement in Preventing Tax Law Violations Project resulted in the opening of a 24-hour hot line to which citizens can report cases of tax evasion and violation of tax laws.

The two-year grant provided by the Charles Stuart Mott Foundation under the 1998 competition came as a reward for the efforts of the Open Society Club – Sliven.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – SMOLYAN

In 1998, the Open Society Club – Smolyan supported and developed 21 projects amounting to a total of $38,030. The efforts of the club were once again focused on preserving and promoting the unique spirit of the Rhodope region, and this was clearly demonstrated in the projects financed by the club: the Rozhen '98 National Folklore Festival, the ecological seminar "Rhodope EcoWorld", the project for urban and administrative development of the region.

Throughout the year, the Smolyan club remained faithful to the tradition of supporting disadvantaged people and marginalized groups. This was the focus of the project for socialization of juvenile delinquents, the sign language course for hearing-impaired people from the region, the project for establishing a consultation center for unemployed women.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – STARA ZAGORA

The main priorities in the activity of the Open Society Club – Stara Zagora in 1998 were civil society, culture, youth, public health and ecology. With 39 projects amounting to a total of $23,365, the club continued to play a significant role in the local community, publicizing its projects and initiatives in its monthly newsletter, launching public campaigns such as the ecological campaign for cleaning the town of Stara Zagora, organizing traditional events such as the Stara Zagora Civil Academy and the Annual Open Society Club Awards.

In 1998, the club managed to attract additional funds from the Open Society Foundation – Sofia for nine of its projects. Three of them were carried out in cooperation with other clubs in the network.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – VARNA

In 1998, the Varna club focused on attracting new resources for its activity. Part of the funds were raised from the Open Society Foundation – Sofia under its programs and the Local Charity Encouragement Scheme, others came as conditional or unconditional grants. Partnership was the key to the club's success in 1998. Many of the projects supported were carried out in cooperation with other organizations and clubs. In the second half of the year, the club participated in four interclub projects. Regional partnership was also actively sought after. The International Black Sea Club, the local Scouts' organization, the Legal Initiative for Education and Development, the Media Foundation, the Municipality of Varna and the Center for Entrepreneurship and Management were among the key partners of the club in 1998. Thus, the Open Society Club – Varna managed to significantly extend its scope, and its grant-making – together with the 324 million leva worth of humanitarian relief provided to social disadvantaged students – topped $107,099. Two key areas of support clearly emerge among the program priorities of the club – these are local charity and support to media. In 1998, the club supported the International Conference "The Media as an Alternative to Balkan Prejudices," organized a series of seminars for radio journalists and managers of private radio stations from all over the country, and took part in the project for monitoring regional public media in the towns of Blagoevgrad, Plovdiv, Stara Zagora, and Varna. The club managed to attract donations for the Carin Dom Foundation, the Gavroche Association, the Center for Children with Disabilities in Provadia, and the Foundling Home in the village of Barzitza.

In 1998, the two-year plan of the Open Society Club – Varna won the support of the Charles Stuart Mott Foundation.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – VELIKO TURNOVO

In 1998, the activity of the club in Veliko Turnovo was not restricted to areas that might seem typical for a university town. Some of the most important projects of the club include training for SME experts, socialization of children living in foundling homes, research on the social and cultural processes in a modern town, and others. Throughout the year, the club supported 23 projects amounting to a total of $25,800.

Many of the projects, which applied to the Open Society Club – Veliko Turnovo were carried out in cooperation with other NGOs. One of the most promising partnerships, which emerged in 1998, was the cooperation with the Board of Trustees of the local Constantine Kissimov Drama Theater, who entrusted the donations for the theater to the Open Society Club – Veliko Turnovo.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – VELINGRAD

Throughout the year, the Open Society Club – Velingrad concentrated on establishing partnerships with similar organizations and institutions. It emerged as a leader of the local NGO community and focused on extending the scope and scale of its projects. In 1998, the club applied for the first time to the Open Society Foundation – Sofia with two projects, which proved successful and managed to rally support.

OPEN SOCIETY CLUB – VRATZA

In 1998, the Open Society Club – Vratza continued to consolidate the efforts of the local NGO community. The 1998 record of the club is impressive: it supported and developed 51 projects topping $24,986. Some of them successfully applied to different programs of the Open Society Foundation – Sofia and attracted additional funding. The most gratifying projects of the club addressed youth and media issues: the seminar "Nonprofit and Informal Youth Associations in Vratza as a Resource in Building Civil Society," the Love Safely Campaign, the round-table discussion „NGO–Media Relations in the Process of Building Civil Society."
